XI. Services

Community library service should include development of library programs for such groups of persons as the aged, handicapped, and pre-school children not ordinarily served by the school library.

XII. Public Relations

Newspaper publicity consisting of book notes, articles of encouragement, and notices are necessary ingredients to a successful community library program.

Posters, public meetings, and public speaking engagements should be utilized to make the community aware of the library services available and need for improvement of such services.

XIII. Dissolution

A. The application for the dissolution of the community library service may be initiated by the public school district or the local governing body.

B. Upon approval by both the State Library Commission and the Department of Public Instruction, the community library may be dissolved and the material assets prorated and returned to each party including the state and federal governments according to the share put in by each agency of government.
